International Organization of Motor Vehicle Manufacturers (OICA) meets in Brussels
VDA President Gottschalk re-elected President of the International Organization of Motor Vehicle Manufacturers

At the 2 June 2006 meeting of the International Organization of Motor Vehicle Manufacturers (Organisation Internationale des Constructeurs d'Automobiles, OICA) in Brussels, the organization's General Assembly unanimously re-elected Prof. Bernd Gottschalk, President of the German Association of the Automotive Industry (VDA), as its president. Prof. Gottschalk has held this office since 2004.

The International Organization of Motor Vehicle Manufacturers (OICA), which is headquartered in Paris, brings together 42 national trade associations, including all the major automobile manufacturing countries. It therefore represents the whole of the automotive industry worldwide. OICA pursues the interests of this industry in international institutions and organizations, coordinates the worldwide technical harmonization in the automotive sector, collects and publishes international statistical data, and certifies and coordinates the International Motor Shows.
